Where Did You Get That Hat?

You might say that Lela Hyams, Hollywood movie actress, was under the big top in this picture, but the only ones having a closer look are the makers of the huge sun hat she is wearing. It shields her face from the sun and allows her to gaze at fashionable hat at the same time. Lela is wearing a bandana bathing costume, just about the latest in beach styles on the coast.

Canadian Government Extends Date 50 Cent Wheat Bonus To Farmers

FARMER RUSH CAUSED BREAK IN GRAIN PRICE

Hurry to Reach Elevators in Time for Benefit Given Blame

OTTAWA, June 6.—The Canadian government will extend the date at which the five-cent bonus on wheat expires from June 15 to June 30. This was announced in official circles and the order in council making the extension will probably be signed today.

One of the reasons given for the delay of over four cents a bushel in the price of wheat in Winnipeg yesterday was the rush of farmers to the elevators to get the balance of their wheat to the elevators in time to obtain the benefit of the bonus.

As the wheat was delivered at the rate of 40 cents a bushel, it was hedged in Winnipeg. With very little export demand, the price of wheat against the grain received forced the market down.

During the spring, the delay in the delivery to the country elevator fell off, but as soon as the wheat was harvested for the farmers who were being drawn to the elevators at the rate of 40.000 bushels a day. The bonus is paid as soon as the wheat that the farmer may deliver his grain and yet get the bonus it is expected that the wheat deliveries will fall off somewhat.

UNION STATION $120,000 LOOT 1928 RECALLED

Fingerprints Identify Dead Man as William Boven

INDIANAPOLIS, June 6.—A man shot and killed Wednesday night by police of Peru, Ind., while he was attempting to blow up a filling station was identified by the state bureau of criminal investigation and identification today as William Boven, sought in connection with a $120,000 mail robbery in Toronto, June 18, 1928.

Boven and four others held up postal employees in a mail car in the station at Toronto.

Following the shooting at Peru, authorities found a passport made out to William R. Miller. The state bureau was notified and Charles P. Bette was dispatched to Peru. Fingerprints of the dead man were made and they were found to correspond with those of Boven.

The latest sent out seven years ago by D. C. Draper, chief constable of Toronto, stated that one of the accomplices had been captured and that $80,000 in cash and some bonds had been recovered. A reward of $2,000 was offered for the capture of Boven.

The intensely hot afternoon wind of Asia and Africa gets its name from the Arabic and means "pol-kon".

Well-informed political circles in Havana assert that appointment of Dr. Orestes Ferrara as Cuba's secretary of state portends the resignation soon of President Gerardo Machado. Under such law the secretary of state succeeds to the presidency when that office becomes vacant. Observers believe President Machado will step aside by July 1, when a payment of $700,000 from Cuba's foreign indebtedness is due. It is said that Dr. Ferrara is considered an acceptable and interim president, although his Italian birth form candidate at the regular election scheduled for Jan. 1. Picture shows Dr. and Mrs. Ferrara.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 6.—The all round spirit of optimism in the west, coupled with the excellent crop prospects through the prairie, is most encouraging, said Hon. R. J. Manion, minister of railways and canals, who with Mrs. Manion and their son Robert, were seated guests at the Banquet given by the Pacific coast.

"All along the Canadian Pacific line I found people who were hopeful and ready to say so. One man summed up the situation very neatly, he said: "This is a land year country and this is next year. This is undoubtably a better spirit in the west than in the east, and this is readily understandable with the country's prospects as they are. A good crop coupled with a return of good prices must really mean a substantial recovery of Canada's purchasing power," he said.

MANION SEES OPTIMISM RAYS OVER PRAIRIES

All 'Round Spirit of Hope Pervades West, Says Minister

BANFF, June 6.—"The all round spirit of optimism in the west, coupled with the excellent crop prospects through the prairie, is most encouraging," said Hon. R. J. Manion, minister of railways and canals, who with Mrs. Manion and their son Robert, were seated guests at the Banquet given by the Pacific coast.

"All along the Canadian Pacific line I found people who were hopeful and ready to say so. One man summed up the situation very neatly, he said: "This is a land year country and this is next year. This is undoubtably a better spirit in the west than in the east, and this is readily understandable with the country's prospects as they are. A good crop coupled with a return of good prices must really mean a substantial recovery of Canada's purchasing power," he said.

Metal Exchange Suspends In Tin As Brokers Fail

LONDON, June 6.—Considerable turbulence was occasioned today when the governing committee of the London Metal Exchange announced temporary suspension of the tin market because of the failure of Laidlaw & Sons to meet its engagements.

The suspension, said the announcement, was to permit continuation of negotiations in connection with important tin contracts with a view to minimizing any disturbance which might otherwise arise.

Bolt of Lightning Explodes Ball But Bather Uninjured

CHICAGO, June 6.—John Davis was playing catch with a baseball yesterday as he stood in the water of Lake Michigan.

A bolt of lightning striking nearby exploded the ball in his hand, he toppled over in the water-miserable. Nobody could find any of the remains of the ball but.

1,000 Passengers Throng Big Liner

QUEBEC, June 6.—For the first time in two years a passenger liner sailed from Quebec with more than 1,000 passengers aboard when the Canadian Pacific ship Duchess of Athol left port Saturday morning with a list totalling exactly 1,070.

Under command of Captain D. MacQueen, R.N.R., the liner is bound for Belfast, Glasgow and Liverpool. Among her passengers are Sir W. J. Maclean, governor of Hong Kong, and Lord Peel, lieutenant-governor of Ontario.

At 4 a.m. Sunday, Countess A. Lytle and C. Woodward, operating the police prowler car, came upon the malinging auto on Portage avenue when it had been abandoned by the thieves. The auto tank was empty.

Manufacturers Open Their Meeting

OTTAWA, June 6.—Assembling for one of the most important conferences the organization has yet held, the Manufacturers' Association opened its first annual meeting here today.

Domestic gathering the prospects of the forthcoming Imperial Economic conference, at which no previous inter-empire assembly has been more widely held, will be exhaustively canvassed. Reports of the various committees will be submitted generally in the light of the coming winter.

Scientists who are studying the quickening process of preserving fruits and vegetables and the forest varieties behave differently.

Motorists Amazed at Performance of the New Ford Eight

"Marvelous!" "Smoothest riding car I've ever known!"

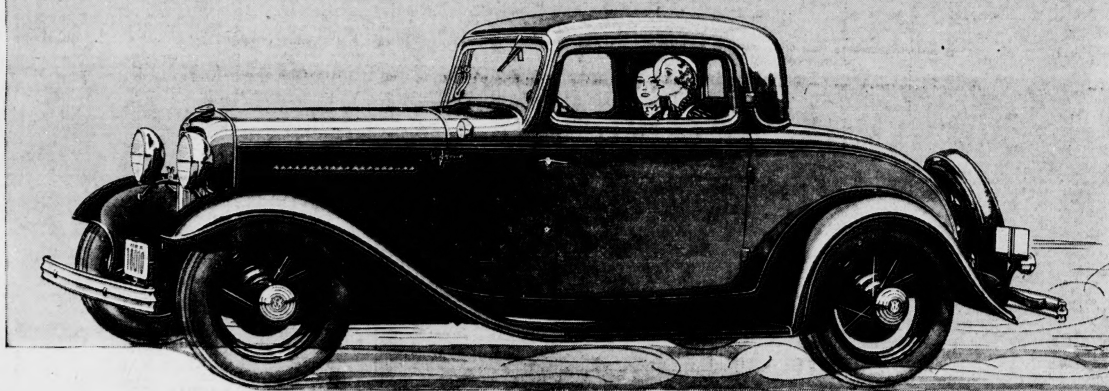

"Back seat as comfortable as front!"

"Like an airplane!" "What wonderful brakes!"

"Faster than I'd hoped!" "You can scarcely hear the engine!"

"I didn't expect such remarkable gasoline mileage!"

"I've never driven a car like it!" "It almost drives itself!"

EVERY MOTORIST who has driven the New Ford Eight has been amazed at its sensational performance and remarkable riding comfort. It isn't just a new eight-cylinder car but a new kind of eight-cylinder car. New in design! New in economy! New in the joy it puts in motoring!

You've never driven a car like it! It's roomier and faster and more comfortable than your fondest hopes. So fleet and responsive and perfectly balanced that it seems to glide over the road without effort.

Your very first ride will tell you that it is the greatest value in the history of the automobile. You'll be more enthusiastic about it than you've been about any car you've ever known—regardless of price.

It is almost unbelievable that such smoothness, speed, power, quiet, comfort and quality can be offered at such low cost.

Smooth, vibrationless eight-cylinder engine. 65 horsepower. Remarkable acceleration. 75 miles an hour. Silent second gear. Silent synchronized gear shift. Automatic spark control. Down-draft carburetor, with silencer. Low, good-looking bodies. Generous room for all passengers. Soft, restful seats. Comfortable riding springs. Self-adjusting Houdaille shock absorbers with thermostatic ride control. Safety glass windshield in all body types. Safety glass throughout in Sport Coupe, Cabriolet, Victoria, Convertible Sedan and all De Luxe cars. Exceptional low cost of operation and up-keep. The built-in reliability and long life characteristic of the Ford car. See the New Ford Eight at the showrooms of the nearest dealer. Drive it yourself for an amazing new thrill in motoring.

ALSO A NEW FORD FOUR

Another great New Ford car. 50-horsepower engine, operating with new smoothness. Sells for $60 less than the New Ford Eight. Same low, roomy beautiful bodies and rich finish. Has many of the outstanding features of the New Ford Eight. See it. Drive it. Know why it is as sensational a value as the New Ford Eight.

CHAPTER I

THE green roadster cutting its way, sleek and ribbon-like down the boulevard came to an abrupt, jolting stop at the intersection with Twenty-fourth street.

Cherry Dixon's chin rose to meet the sweep of the cold wind. Fluttering ends of a coral scarf escaped from her throat to do a mad dance over one shoulder. It was one of those days in early April when brilliant sunshine showered down on the world without warming it. The pale gold radiance seemed almost to make the air more biting. But it was spring sunshine, spring air and the combination was irresistible.

Cherry crooked her wrist for a quick glance at a watch dial. Only 1:10 now. She was not due for 20 minutes. There was plenty of time—oh plenty to reach the Wellington for her 1:30 engagement.

She had known all along there was time enough. Little danger that today of all days she would be late!

Another halt for traffic lights and then on again. Cherry's impatience was gone. What a day it was to be 19, to know the beige suit was as becoming as it was new, to be on her way to meet an exciting young man and to know—at least to know almost—that he cared as much about the meeting as she did!

Warm color that could not have been accounted for by the April wind crept into Cherry Dixon's cheeks. A chance observer, feminine, would have been almost sure to think "Lucky girl!" at sight of Cherry, so pretty, so youthful, at the wheel of her expensive roadster. A chance observer, masculine, would have been almost sure to think, "Lucky break to know a girl like that!"

Well, Cherry thought that she was lucky. For none of the reasons chance observers might have cited, however.

It had been the greatest luck in the world, surely, that for the second time in a week she was to see Dan Phillips. Oh, it had been simple to manage, telling Mother about the Guild committee meeting and to drive into town alone. There had been a committee meeting—until Gretchen postponed it. For that matter, what other girl of 19 would have to explain where she was going and with whom if the notion to take a drive at midday happened to strike her?

THE roadster reached the viaduct and was swept into the slow stream of east-bound travel. At Twelfth street, Wellington's busiest thoroughfare, boasting three buildings 20 stories high—the flash of green was almost lost in the crush of taxicabs, trucks, limousines and small, wheezing vehicles.

There was no time now to try to justify her deception; no time for day dreams. The shrill, authoritative blast of an officer's whistle sent the swarming mass ahead. The girl in the green car managed expertly to keep abreast of the current. Three blocks more and the roadster swerved to the curb before the Hotel Wellington.

Cherry stepped out, surrendered the car to a doorman and entered the gray stone building. She crossed the lobby and mounted the broad stairway leading to the mezzanine.

Mazie Cassidy, whose glowing titian curls and blue eyes made the cigar stand a highly decorative corner of the lobby, tapped the arm of her friend, Joe Kampschmidt, who was leaning over the glass surface of the counter.

"Well—look what blew in!" Mazie whispered in a tone that belied her indifferent gaze.

Kampschmidt concentrated on the slim figure ascending the stairway. "Some baby!" he said casually. "Who is she?"

"Some baby's right!" Mazie commented. "What I wouldn't give for the dough her old man's got! Cherry Dixon—that's her name. Lives out in Sherwood Heights in one of those swell houses with a yard around it as big as a farm. I've seen her picture on the society pages. Most of the time she's away—in Europe or at some swell school or something. Gosh—some people have all the luck!"

"How about me, Mazie? Do I get a break this trip or are you going to another of your sixteen cousins' weddings?"

Mazie grinned. "You can call me," she said. "About eight o'clock. There's a new orchestra at the Crystal Ballroom."

Whereupon Miss Cassidy and her friend forgot their interest in Cherry Dixon for more personal subjects.

It was 20 minutes after Cherry Dixon's arrival that a tall young man strode into the Wellington lobby. He wore a gray suit and carried a topcoat. His gray felt was tipped at an angle just slightly rakish. Bro shoulders, rather angular. Not a handsome young man but an attractive one.

In a dozen strides he had reached the stairway. Someone sang out, "Hi! Phillips!" just before he rounded the bend of the stairs. The young man turned, waved in salute and continued on his way.

THE mezzanine floor of the Hotel Wellington was a rather narrow gallery running the length of the Twelfth street side of the building. It was thickly carpeted and crisscrossed in shades of wood green, bronze and ivory. Groups of overstuffed chairs, benches and four high-backed lounges were arranged near the iron work railing to overlook the first floor. Small desks and chairs stood beside the wall. The lighting was dim because heavy draperies shut out the daylight and only small desk lamps supplemented it.

The young man in gray gained the top step and looked about. None of the persons in sight seemed to interest him. There was a stout man in dark-rimmed spectacles writing at the nearest desk. Farther on two matrons engaged in conversation, one of them gesticulating emphatically. At the extreme end of the gallery a small boy was bobbing about after a mechanical toy.

The young man stepped forward uncertainly. All at once he caught sight of a beige shoulder nearly hidden by the sides of a wing-backed chair. He made for that chair. "So there you are!"

"Oh, Dan—!"

"Cherry!"

Brown hair laughed up at gray ones. The girl was prettier when she smiled. The green velvet of the chair was a perfect background for her coloring. The small, rather oval face was creamy ivory except where tinges of rose burned through on each cheek. Curling lashes made the dark eyes darker. Her lips were crimson, possibly explained by the silver vanity case she held. Nature had designed those lips a trifle wider but the effect was charming.

Any expert would have said, too, that Cherry Dixon's nose was a fraction short of classic standards. Somehow the defect increased instead of detracted from the piquant total.

The tilted brim of her close fitting brown hat revealed a crescent of dark hair over one temple. Except for the brown hat and coral scarf Cherry was entirely in beige—beige suit and sweater, beige pumps and cobweb hose, gloves and even a purse of the same shade. The tone suited her perfectly.

DAN PHILLIPS pulled the nearest chair nearer and swung into it.

"A thousand pardons if I'm late," he began. "I had three o'clocks and a watch and I set 'em all—"

"But you're not late. You're five minutes ahead of time. See?" Cherry held up a slender wrist banded with platinum. The tiny oblong dial on the platinum band recorded 25 minutes past one. "I—I came in early for some errands and finished them sooner than I expected," she added. Presumably No. 11 for Miss Cherry Dixon that day, but surely she must keep him from guessing at her eagerness.

"Then it's all right. Of course the three o'clocks each keep different time and I couldn't be sure—excuse me. Miss Dixon, but I've got to stop right here and tell you that of all God's fairest creatures you are the prettiest, the most utterly devastating—!"

"Please, Mr. Phillips!" The cheeks were crimson but the girl's eyes were laughing.

"Mr. Phillips? I thought it was going to be 'Dan' from now on?"

"Well then, Dan, stop it. You're making fun of me!"

"If I ever heard blasphemy—!" Coyotes and cutieflair! Why, my dear young woman, I'd as soon cut off my right arm. What I really meant to say was that the prettiest girl in the world is looking prettier than she has any right to look. What's going to come of this? You can't keep it up, you know. These old eyes won't stand it. You can't keep getting more beautiful every time I see you!"

Cherry rose to meet the teasing. She said demurely, "Sorry, sir. You can always look away, you know."

"But that's just what I can't do—and don't want to. Say, are you as hungry as I am?"

The abrupt change of subject made the girl laugh. "Grinning," she said. "Positively perishing!"

"Then let's find food!" Phillips snapped, two fingers together with a resounding crack and was on his feet. Cherry arose and for an instant they stood there, the girl's head only a little above the youth's shoulder. Her eyes held a dancing light of happiness. The young man's face beamed. He touched her arm and together they moved toward the stairs.

FIVE minutes later they faced each other across a narrow table in the hotel's ivory and blue dining room. Phillips had finished giving the order.

"And how did you improve the shining morning hours?" he asked.

"Oh, doing lots of things. Mother's having a small tea next week and I helped with the invitations. Then some dresses came and when I tried them on they were all wrong and I had to telephone about sending them back and arrange for a fitting. After that Sarah gave me a shampoo and a manicure and—let's see—oh, yes, I ailed Aunt Clara to see if she wanted some concert tickets and she talked about half an hour. She always does. That's all, I guess."

"The life of the idle rich!" Dan Phillips sighed with mock sympathy. "Lord—you must be frazzled."

"How about yourself? What kind of a busy bee have you been?"

"Shall I tell you?" Phillips leaned forward, grinning. "Rolled out of bed at exactly 12 o'clock—according to my four time-pieces. I looked at them all, added what the minute hands said, subtracted the hours, multiplied, took the square root and then called the operator down stairs. She told me it was 12 o'clock. The boy's clever—what?"

"That's the latest kind of morning I ever heard of."

"True enough," Phillips agreed. "But listen, child. Old

Uncle Daniel was out until 2:30 this a.m. looking for that kidnapped James kid."

"The one who was stolen? Oh—did you find him?"

"No, unfortunately! Just as I was leaving the office last night a phony tip came in and Bates told me to hop on it. Woman telephoned the kid had been seen out near Somerset. I went out with a couple of deputies and we covered every square foot of the damned place. Don't suppose you've ever been to Somerset. No? Well, congratulate yourself. Anyhow it was just another evening wasted and the esteemed Wellington News none the better for it. We didn't get back into town until after one o'clock."

"And they haven't found the little boy?"

"Not according to the Moon edition. Personally I don't think they ever will."

"Oh, but I hope they do! I was so sorry for that poor mother when I read about it. The way she'd been planning his birthday party and the new tricycle she'd bought. It seems dreadful!"

"Sure, it's hard on the parents. Nice people, too. But it's been a week and there hasn't been a single clue that led anywhere."

THE waiter set glass-domed plates before them. Sweetbread patty and asparagus for Cherry. A roast and vegetables for Dan.

"Coffee now, sir?" the waiter asked.

They decided to have the coffee later. The girl broke a bit of Melba toast and buttered it.

"When you talk about the places you go and people you see," she said, "I'm so envious. It must be wonderful to be at the center of things, always right there when something exciting is happening! It must be thrilling."

"Some times," Phillips agreed. "Most of the time though it's just pounding sidewalks or sitting around waiting for something to happen. Why, we haven't had a real story except the James case for weeks. You get fed up on it."

"But the thrill of seeing your name at the top of a column—and on the front page, too! That must be wonderful!"

Phillips smiled. "It was," he said, "four years ago. The day I got my first by-line you'd have thought someone had just handed me a couple of railroads. That was in Kansas City—Kansas, not Missouri. As I remember, it wasn't a bad story I'd written either."

"How long have you worked on newspapers, Dan?"

"Oh, about five years, counting summer vacations. I've been on the News 18 months now. That's almost a record! Before that I was on the Sentinel for six months."

"But you've been in many other places. You've worked on papers in lots of cities, haven't you? You know what you said about the way I spent the morning? I wish I didn't have to do things like that. I wish Father would let me learn to—well, to work in his office or something!"

"You'd distract all the men."

"Silly! Of course, the real reason is because Father doesn't approve of girls working. He's terribly old-fashioned. Mother is, too."

"That's not old-fashioned. If you'll tell me one reason in the world why the daughter of Walter J. Dixon should bang a typewriter—"

"Oh, but it's not just about me that he feels that way. Father doesn't think any girls should work."

Phillips smiled wryly. "He doesn't exactly look with favor on young men of the press, either, does he?" he asked.

The girl was startled. "Why, he doesn't even know—" she began.

Phillips cut in. "Doesn't know his daughter has made the acquaintance of a poor news slave named Daniel Phillips?" Oh, no. I merely heard the financial editor giving an account of a first hand encounter with your father. Boy—how that man loves the Fourth Estate! "Scandal mongers." "Picture snatchers." Those were a few of his pet names."

The dark lashes lowered. "His daughter doesn't think those things," the girl said.

THEIR eyes met. There was a moment's silence and then Cherry went on hurriedly. "It's because Father doesn't understand. He's so terribly dignified and—well, he just doesn't understand! All his life Father's been giving orders and seeing people jump to obey them. Of course he's wonderful but he has so many old-fashioned ideas."

"You don't have to tell me! Blue ribbon aristocracy with three rings around it—that's the Dixon family. Money bags and the good ship Mayflower! Cherry, to think the likes of you should be seen in a public eating place with that low-down Dan Phillips!"

"He's not low-down and he's practically the only friend I have! Dan, do you realize it's been terribly lonesome for me here in Wellington?"

"Lonesome! Haven't you the cream of the town's society to pick from? Haven't you lived here since infancy?"

"I was born here. I've lived here of course, too, but when I was a little girl there weren't half a dozen children I was allowed to play with. When I was 12 they sent me to school in France. The last two years I've been at Miss Rathburne's. During vacations I came home but the boys and girls I used to know aren't here and I can't seem to get acquainted with the others. They've gone to western schools and they talk about fraternities and sororities and all sorts of sports I don't understand. Father doesn't approve of girls playing golf and tennis so I never learned. It's because he hates country clubs. And I've never seen a football game. In school at Miss Rathburne's I had good time but now that I'm home again it's so lonesome!"

Phillips' face sobered. "Poor little rich girl," he said softly. "Poor little rich girl who has everything in the world except what she wants! Cherry—I'm a swell one to be saying it but if there's ever anything in this world I can do for you, all you have to do is say the word. You know that, don't you?"

The pink flush came into the girl's cheeks again. You've been doing things for me ever since the minute I first saw you!"

"One month ago today, wasn't it? That's why we're celebrating."

They both laughed. As vividly as though it had been yesterday, Cherry Dixon pictured that first meeting. A sleeting March day with slippery pavements. Herself, snugly wrapped in beaver, at the wheel of the green roadster. The approach to the Court street bridge and sudden change in traffic lights. Another car close behind her. The crash!

She had no clear idea of the events that crowded after that. Someone had helped the terrified girl from the roadster. There had been shouts and swarming, curious faces. She had heard a man call "Get a doctor!" and another, "He's not hurt!" Then policemen were ordering the crowd to move back.

It developed that the men in the touring car—there were two of them—were not injured, at least not seriously. A few cuts and bruises. The rear of Cherry's roadster had been dented. The other driver denied the collision had been his fault, denied it so vociferously that 20 minutes later before a police captain he was charged with driving while intoxicated.

Cherry, bewildered and frightened, heard the charge. She did not understand why she had to be there. What alarmed her most was the increasing fear that her father would have to know. All her life long the possibility of displeasing her father had been held over Cherry as the ultimate threat. He would be furious—might refuse to let her keep the roadster!

THAT was when Dan Phillips appeared. Dan, loitering at district headquarters, had in five minutes collected details of the collision. They were scribbled on copy paper, ready to be telephoned to the office. All at once Cherry Dixon's helplessness, her obvious fright did something to Dan's news sense. He happened to be the only reporter present.

"Look here," he said to her. "You'd like to get out of this, wouldn't you?"

"Oh, if they'd only let me go home—!"

"Want to file charges against that fellow? You could collect all right."

Cherry decided wanting to do anything except escape. The damage to her own car was slight. She would pay for the repairs gladly from her allowance—anything to end the affair and be away.

"See what I can do for you?" Phillips had volunteered.

"That had been the beginning. For Dan, almost immediately, was escorting Cherry from the building. Together they drove away in the roadster. Together they stopped at a downtown tea room. The reporter had insisted Cherry needed something hot to drink, something to quiet her nerves.

Nothing about the affair appeared in the columns of the Wellington News and nothing of it reached the ears of Walter J. Dixon.

That was the way the surprising friendship had come about. A dozen times since then the young couple had met. It was Cherry who had found excuses when Dan wanted to call for her at Briarport, the Dixon home. She had been vague about it, knowing well what a bombshell would explode if either her father or mother should suspect her of associating with a News reporter.

But in a tiny corner of Cherry's mind she knew the conflagration was imminent. She had been drifting with delight, breathless madness toward something she refused to face. She didn't want to stop drifting. It was such paradise!

She knew—and refused to know—what had happened. Cherry was in love.

Today, since it was the one in seven when Dan did not have to work, the two had planned to lunch together and then drive into the country.

They finished their coffee and left the dining room. Outdoors the sunshine was glorious, banishing every possible care. The roadster was brought around and Cherry had stepped into it when she heard someone call.

She turned. A short, heavily built man had caught Dan Phillips' arm. He had been running and gulped for breath. "The newspaper exclaimed, 'The Boss is looking for you! Don't you know what's happened?'"
